AN ICON

The STOFF Nagel candle holder stands anchored on three legs, casting a sleek, chilly glow with its three domes. The iconic design is considered a work of art — a personal statement and malleable sculpture ready to assume the shape of its owner's unique creativity.

From American cartridge cases transformed into decorative objects during the Second World War to a world-famous design considered among the most iconic of its time. The STOFF Nagel candle holder designed by Werner Stoff for Hans Nagel in the 1960's, is the essence of form and functionality. A sculptural object for multiple purposes — in its purest function holding candles or exhibited as an art object bringing a touch of wonder to the space.

THE STORY

It was the visual artist and architect Werner Stoff who in the late 1960's designed the original candle holder for his friend Hans Nagel. During a skiing vacation in The Alps, Hans Nagel was struck by an idea after an accidental backward tumble forced him to break the fall with his hand, thus creating the finest three finger holes in the snow. The holes brought a sculptural candle holder design with room for three slim candles to mind.

The shared love for good design and passion for art between the two artists launched an adventure of unforgettable design. For years, the iconic candle holder was out of production, but in 2015 Danish design company STOFF Copenhagen resuscitated the iconic piece using Werner Stoff's original drawings.

1939-1945 WORLD WAR II

The Nagel family was deeply affected by the war. The four Nagel brothers were sent out at night to collect empty American cartridge cases.

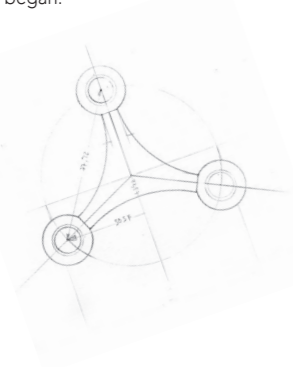

Their blacksmith father transformed them into decorative objects.

1960s THE BIRTH OF AN ICON

An accidental backward tumble, during a skiing vacation, forced Hans Nagel to break the fall with his hands thus creating the finest three finger holes in the snow.

The perfect formation brought a candle holder to mind. Nagel asked the architect Werner Stoff if he would design it for him. And so a true design adventure began.
